Not illustrated. 1922 Excerpt: . . . upon by the appellant Company, namely, that it may adopt uniform rates having regard to the probable quantity of water which applicants are likely to consume and to the distance from the place wherever the water is to be drawn does not help its contention. This clause evidently refers to the distance of the pipes or trunks from the source of supply and not to the service pipes leading from the main pipes. If it were otherwise, and the Act contemplated that the consumers were to lay and pay for their own service pipes from the main to the curb line, what possible difference could it make to the company what distance the service pipes had to be thus laid It could only affect the company provided it and not the consumer was to bear the expense of their laying and maintenance. Nor are we forced to a different conclusion by reason of the fact that the Act of 1834, supra, authorizes the Company to adopt such by-laws, rules and regulations as shall not contravene the Constitution and laws of the United States or of this Commonwealth. This provision was only declaratory of the law that the by-laws of a corporation must not be repugnant to the Constitution and laws of the United States and the Constitution and laws of this Commonwealth. German General Beneficial Assn. of Phila. , 30 Pa. 155. It is contained in the general corporation Act of April 29, 1874, P. L....
