Not illustrated. 1772 Excerpt: .of the store-ship, or ships; this division, they fay, is to pay them the advance they are in for the public. By such artful schemes of keeping the company in debt, which need never be, (and I suppose but few of the free-i men of the company know they are liable to) they endeavour to sanctify their proceedings. I have no ill-will to any man on the coast, yet I think also it my duty, as a good subject and free trader, to throw in my mite of knowledge, as it may possibly draw the attention of some one man in power to lend his aid towards reforming and regulating, perhaps, the most useful and beneficial commerce this nation now enjoys, considering it in all its views.--It employs great numbers of our poor manufacturers, and our colonies cannot exist without negroes. The legislature, I observe, is taking much pains to regulate the India company and their affairs. Query, whether the African trade is not of more solid advantage to the nation, than the Eajl India trade, or might be made so? The East Indies produce a great deal of partial riches, which has an evident tendency to overturn our happy constitution; whereas the African trade diffuses, like gentle showers, its kindly benefits throughout all the British dominions; I am a speculative man, though now a seaman, and could enlarge on this copious subject. What I have now committed to paper, are the serious genuine thoughts of...
