But not merely was the interior of the sacred fabric thronged, hundreds of persons who had failed to obtain admittance were collected outside. Precisely at eleven o clock, Prince Charles Edward, mounted on a richly caparisoned charger, preceded by a guard of honour, and attended by all the nobles and chieftains belonging to his army, rode up to the gates of the churchyard, where he alighted. A lane was formed for him by the spectators, through which he passed, and on entering the church by the south porch, he was ceremoniously conducted to the choir, where he took his seat in the warden s stall. Next to him sat the Duke of Perth, and...
